Partners in Education

Sine 1987, the Escambia County School District has formally recognized the importance of partnerships with businesses, civic clubs, churches and the military. These partnerships work collaboratively to give the school added resources and the partner, an opportunity to play a direct role in improving education.

Partners in Education come in all sizes — from large corporations and military commands to small businesses and social groups. Every partner's contribution makes a difference. Whether it's hands-on volunteering, in-kind donations, or financial contributions — it is put to work to enhance education for Escambia County students. Partnerships can be established with individual schools, programs, or the District.

Why Become a Partner?

Everyone is a stakeholder in education.

Purpose of Partnerships

- To provide greater awareness and understanding of the needs and resources of the school and business community.
- To work together to provide highest student achievement.
- To provide better educated students who are future employees and consumers.
- To provide ongoing dialogue between schools and the business community.
- To work together to improve and enhance educational programs responsive to the needs of the students, business community, and our society.
